

GIS Liaison Program

Liaisons are the principal means by which OCTO GIS communicates with District of Columbia agencies, its most important customers. A liaison's job is to help District agencies plan, develop, and efficiently utilize GIS to improve delivery of services. Some of the activities involved in the program are:

- Managing projects and coordinating interaction between OCTO GIS technical staff and agencies
- Keeping the GIS plan up-to-date
- Performing needs assessments, requirements analyses, and implementation planning
- Facilitating data exchange and providing documentation
- Providing GIS support for special projects
- Identifying grant and support opportunities
- Providing or assisting with Project Management

Liaisons must understand the full breadth of OCTO GIS offerings in order to match agencies with the best available data, applications, and services for their needs. Liaison assignments have evolved over time, but are generally aligned with the deputy mayor clusters. Independent agencies that can benefit from GIS have also been assigned a GIS liaison. GIS liaisons must also understand other OCTO programs that affect their customer agencies. Therefore, each of the Service Modernization Programs has also been assigned a GIS liaison.

GIS liaisons are required to have a face-to-face meeting with each of their agencies at least once every 180 days.
